SCHOOLS ABROAD.

Mr. E. A. Riley, M.A., inspector of schools, and formerly headmaster of the Marlborough school, returned last Monday from a seven months' trip abroad. Mr. Riley visited America to inquire into the school system in that country, with a view to reporting to the department.

In the course of conversation he said that in the American elementary schools, English was about the most thoroughly taught subject. Reading seemed to be generally well-taught, much better results being obtained than in New South Wales. This success was powerful and skillful use of phonics; (2), the plentiful supply of fine readers. In oral language (composition) the Americans seemed to have accomplished what we in Australia were aiming at. Written composition by girls and boys did not spell as well as Australian children. Mr. Riley went on to say that on several occasions he found classes whose knowledge of Australian geography and of English history would not give our classes credit for the first year. This was due to the general use of good text-books—a matter which would have to be taken up in New South Wales. The method adopted in America for teaching the art of writing was similar to that obtaining in the elementary schools of the United States. The method in American schools had reached a reactionary stage in that facility in the fundamental operations seemed to be the basis and end-all in the elementary schools. What he saw of this subject reminded him of the conditions in the schools of the South Wales. These were tests granting exemption certificates to pupils. Nature study in America was dead, and the outlook in this work in Australia was far more satisfactory. Biology was universally well taught, and the method of instruction was a "life-size" type.

of music" was fortunately absent. Art work was generally well handled, though Sydney could well hold her own in that respect.

RURAL CAMP SCHOOLS.

The spring term of the rural camp schools for city boys will this year be held at Bathurst from October 12 prox. to November 30 next. Four sessions will be held, commencing respectively on October 12, October 26, November 9, and November 22. It has been decided that all schools in the city and suburban areas of Sydney and Newcastle shall

The units are divided into the usual 12 boys' teams, with teacher in charge. Schools may supply more than one unit, or they may combine with other schools.

THE P.S. A.A.A.

To-morrow the P.S. A.A.A. will hold its twenty-second annual sports and displays at the Sydney Cricket Ground. This second annual sports day has become a venerable portion of the educational work of New South Wales, and according to the chief inspector, "The Teachers' Amateur Athletic Associations it

ABORIGINAL LIFE.

No. 3 of the records of the Education Society is an interesting pamphlet on a series of lessons in "Aboriginal life," compiled by K. R. Cramp, M.A., of the Teachers' College.

Realism was given to the lessons by the exhibition of the various weapons and tools of the aborigines.

UNCLASSIFIED TEACHERS.

In light of the recent increases in salary to the lower-paid teachers of this State, and especially to the teachers of small schools, and especially notice in the latest issue of the Journal of the American Statistical Association. "It is observed that many unqualified teachers and assistants, men and women, who enter the service as pupil teachers or as teachers of small schools, are content to remain unqualified, and so the manifest detriment to the efficiency of the service is increased." "To help teachers to qualify by examination for a classification, classes have been in operation in many parts of the State, but still the proportion of teachers without a classification is large."

The subjects taught are Latin, French, and mathematics, and the requirement as to attendance of six at each sitting. Art classes have also been in operation in many parts of the State during the last four or five years, with a view to helping teachers in their daily school work, and to assist them in meeting the demand for art teachers. DANGER IN THE WATTLE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR.—With reference to Mr. Webb's statement in your issue of the 9th inst., headed "Danger of the Wattle," the question that he raises is a medical one, and no doubt will require the necessary effort.

draw the attention of medical practitioners. The flowering of the wattle has come under my notice personally, but it is very likely that some of our countrymen have seen certain individuals who are liable to hay fever, have known a paddock of Cape weed after a man has been mowed, and the next day the hay has feathered in his garden; it made him miserably ill. One of the so-called dog-days of New South Wales is the day when the pollen of two persons to my knowledge, I heard of a case near Port Stephens where cobblers' apprentices in flower gardens were obliged to keep their cottage till the plants had begun to flower. Doubtless your readers can give other instances of reactions from the pollen of which is known as hay fever.

I should, of course, be very sorry if the wattle would injure anybody, but, if a delinquent it all shares the drawback with many others of our native flowers.

Perhaps bee-keepers would be able to inform you at to what extent it is a pest to people by wattles in flower. I am, etc.

BILE BEANS COMPLETELY CURE AFTER MANY MEDICINES FAIL.

Mrs. N. Murphy, of 91 Kerr-street, Fitzroy, Melbourne, says: "Severe attacks of rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and other pains and sicknesses I suffered considerably during the winter periods, and at all times the pains were so acute that that which all over me, and I thought I would die of it. Doctor Deane's medicine was the only one to relieve me of all my misery. Trying to get relief I tried many remedies, but nothing, until I got Doctor Deane's medicine, which cured me. Bill Deane. Soon after commencing the course of Bill Deane's patent began to feel better, and the pains gradually disappeared, and with each dose taken. My health improved until all the pains and sickness left me, and now I am well as ever. I have been two years a sufferer from rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, and other pains, but passed since Bill Deane cured me. I have not had any return of my complaint. Bill Deane's medicine is the only one that cured me."

MEAT EXPORT TRADE.

The second International Congress of Refrigerated Industries is to be held in Vienna next month, and extensive preparations are being made for it upon a scale that will probably result in excellent results for the meat trade. On the occasion of the last congress most of the time was devoted to the preliminary work incidental to the initiation of a scheme of future congresses, which will play an important part in the future relations of the world. The delegates from Australasia at the first congress entered upon their duties with a hope that the deliberations would result in the removal of those barriers to international trade which have rendered it impossible for Australia and New Zealand to introduce their frozen meat into foreign ports. Soon, however, became apparent that when questions of vital importance to Australasian interests could be more than referred to, and they realised that any discussion of the removal of such barriers would necessarily be deferred until the next congress. The Vienna meeting will afford the opportunity for which the delegates have waited. Italy, Germany, Japan, and other foreign countries are expected to be present, and is able to supply them if their ports are opened to the trade. Agrarian interests in those countries have fought hard to prevent the importation of meat, and it is probable the coming congress will assist in removing the obstruction. The meat trade of Australasia, with Great Britain is growing, and the high poor population of the old country is the principal cause of the demand for some, and at the same time cheap meat is procurable from Australia. It has taken some considerable time to overcome the prejudice in the matter, but it is now established we may fairly assume that at the present time the objection to it is almost wholly removed, and it is not unreasonable to expect that the quantities imported in Great Britain within the next decade may be more than doubled. The marvellous productiveness of Australia's flocks and herds, however, will necessitate the expansion of the export trade in frozen meat, and the Government will provide for an outlet even beyond the increased demand likely to come from the United Kingdom. Although the quantity of the refrigerated meat exported from Australia through the Smithfield market is enormous, it is insufficient for the requirements of Great Britain's millions, and it has been necessary to draw upon Australia, New Zealand, South America, and other countries for the balance. It is a significant fact that the home-grown supplies are materially decreasing, and while internal requirements are largely expanding, the export trade is becoming more pronounced. But those supplies will not, of course, come wholly from Australia and New Zealand. Argentina will supply a large quantity of mutton, and South of Great Britain, and will be the principal source of supply in the matter of beef and mutton. Were it possible to secure the whole of Great Britain's trade, Australia and New Zealand would find it difficult to supply the other markets, but this, of course, hardly likely to occur, and for that reason efforts must be consistently in the direction of new foreign markets. America, Holland, and other countries have at present her meat production is rapidly below her requirements, and never in her history has the need of outside supplies been more pressing than at the present time. If her ports were open to the Australian trade she would be provided with a meat supply at so low a figure as to come within reach of the bulk of her large and growing population. The whole of the world have been placed upon meat importations into that country are prohibitive, and unless these can be removed through the instrumentality of the Government, the future of the world will be little chance of Australia and New Zealand benefiting. In a lesser degree, perhaps, the same remarks may be applied to Italy. They that already been able to supply a good deal of the whole, but there is also an embargo upon it there. The Federal High Commissioner and the various State Agents-General have, however, been urging the removal of the restrictions at the various foreign ports of Europe. The outlook in the United States of America is undoubtedly good, and it is probable that the States there has some steady decrease in flocks and herds for some considerable time, and the fact cannot be hidden that it may require more than her own resources to supply the wants for her, perhaps, are conditions so favourable for the production of mutton and lamb as in Australasia, and it is probable that the best possible results there must be concerted action on the part of Australia and New Zealand to secure the removal of the restrictive foreign trade, it to the present state of affairs. It is absolutely necessary that the Australasian delegates attending the congress at Vienna next month should make their representations in regard to their respective countries as sympathetic attention.

BARREN JACK LANDS.

A good number of people in the Narrandera district are anxious to know what the actual effect of the recent Act passed dealing with the Barren Jack lands. The Government is understood to be desirous of resuming all land affected by the irrigation work at a retrospective value. That is, the value of the land when the work was begun. If this is the intention it is to be carried on. The objective, to secure the increased value resulting from this undertaking, is clear, and the general opinion is that the Government is right in its aim. Whether it will be reached is another matter. The trouble is that a good deal of land has changed hands within the last three years, and the value of the land has risen. The Government is particularly anxious to secure the irrigation work is undoubtedly responsible to a large degree for that increase, but at the same time portion of the land has been taken place throughout the State. In the case of original holders who still have the land, it will be hard on them if they are not to benefit from the increase in value. They are naturally interested, therefore, in knowing exactly what the Act means and what is going to be done. In the case of men who have recently commenced, and to whom the land has been given, and in a course that cannot be contemplated by the Government. Yet there is an impression that this is the purport of the bill, and it would be well to ascertain in regard to the question was forthcoming in regard to the same.

ITEMS.

A crop of mangolds, grown at Blenheim, N.Z., yielded 160 tons to the acre.

The proposed sheep dog trial at next Novra show has been changed to a cattle dog trial. It was suggested to the committee that cattle dogs were more useful than sheep dogs, and that competition would be more likely to be keener. They will work poodles as directed by the stewards.

Many complaints come from various centres of the district (writes our (Sydney correspondent) regarding restrictions and innovations forced upon dairymen by inspectors under the Dairies Supervision Act, together with the fact that the milk of such reasonable supervision in matters of this kind is absolutely essential, in order that the health of the community can be efficiently maintained, there appears to be an element of common sense in the enactment of this Act. The stereotyped complaint of dairymen is that what will satisfy one inspector will not satisfy another, and that the company shall pay all freight.

At a meeting of the Camden Dairymen's Association a report from the executive committee was received, recommending that the agreement be one form of contract for the supply of milk for the year 1931, under which suppliers to the F.F. and I. Company shall supply milk, and to contain conditions as to the manner of delivery, and the price to be paid. The committee also recommended that the minimum price shall be 6½d per gallon, and that the company shall pay all freight.

It was pointed out that at present suppliers are acting under different contracts. Some are the privilege of forwarding the whole of the milk to the F.F. and I. Company, while others stop two days, while those outside stop three days. The committee also recommended that the company should be empowered their representatives to accept the recommendation of the executive, provided that no sacrifice was made from the contract now controlling the supply of milk, with allowing for five days' milkings out of seven.

The improvement in the outlook in the Corowa district owing to the recent rains has been very noticeable. The district was in a state of dire straits at the end of August was responsible for wilting grass and crops. These, however, have put on new life, and under the influence of warm days and heavy showers the pastures are becoming green and healthy again.

Given the continuance of favourable conditions, the very best milk should be forthcoming. It is questionable whether there is any other part of Australia which is recovering itself to quick recoveries as Southern Riverina.

Sharing is well under way in the Corowa district, and the clip, despite unfavourable weather, is being made in good time. The district, both as regards quantity and quality. Each year the tendency is for the farmer to go in for cross breeds, Lincoln ram and merino ewe being most favoured. This season the tendency is to go in for cross breeds, Lincoln ram and merino ewe being most favoured. (FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

BRADFORD, Aug. 12.

Conditions in the Woolmarket are becoming more encouraging signs, all indicative of a very healthy and satisfactory trade. To the majority the present is indeed a marvellous time, and many people seem to be of the opinion that the worst is over. The fact that at present about throughout the whole of the manufacturing areas of the West Riding. We have here a very sharp contrast to the situation in the cotton industry. All through the world, the cotton industry is in a state of depression, and there is no doubt that the cotton trade, gigantic as it is, is far more under the thumb of "bulls" and "bears" than is the wool trade. monetary relations between the parties had been so confused by the time that it was impossible to ascertain exactly the truth regarding them. Defendant's case was that he had made no agreement with plaintiff himself and the plaintiff that defendant should give up all his right to the 100 acres and receive $250 to be paid by defendant. Plaintiff denied that there was any such agreement, and this was proved by the testimony of some of the witnesses. The issue was upon the defendant to prove the agreement. He failed to do so, whereat the court was right who had said that both plaintiff and defendant were unreasonable. It was held that the plaintiff was not satisfied that the agreement alleged by the father was proved. On the whole, he could only say that the father was probably mistaken. It was not affirmed that the defendant had proved his case. The parties had only themselves to rely on. There was no other evidence, such as loose papers. A few lines of writing might easily have settled the matter, but they were not produced. The court relied on human memories. He held that the defendant was trustee for the plaintiff of the land transferred and he was forced to locate him from human memories. The defendant restraining the defendant from prosecuting a common law action regarding the land. Defendant to pay the costs.

Plosswell v. Walder.

Mr. J. A. Ferguson, instructed by Messrs. Blythe and Gifford, appeared for the plaintiff, Frederick William Plosswell; and Mr. Loxton, K.C., and Mr. Cline, appeared for the defendant, R. H. Walder and M. A. Walder.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, a financial inventor, who had declared void a partnership agreement in a patent horse rug made by the factory, which was owned by horse manufacturers and vendors of horse rugs. Plaintiff's case was that the defendant had obtained possession of the patents with him and they should share the profits from the invention, the plaintiff claiming that he was the sole inventor. The defendants, and furnished drawings of. He subsequently found that the defendants were in fraud of plaintiff's rights.

The defendants denied that plaintiff's allegations that such an agreement had been made between them.

The case stands still heard.

THEFT OF HORSE.

Mr. Norris, instructed by Messrs. Curran and Harry, appeared for the plaintiff, William John Norris, of 28, Portland-place, Dartington. Mr. S. Bull, for the defendant, J. Harvey, horse-dealer, of 24 Myrtle-place, Darlington.

The defence was that the horse was not stolen, but was sold by the plaintiff to defendant to plaintiff, which was represented, plaintiff claiming that he had a majority of judgment was the horse was before he bought it. The plaintiff claimed that the horse was sold to the plaintiff in a way sanctioned by the police, and that the defendant had received the amount realised.

ACTION AGAINST EMPLOYERS.

Mr. Edwards, instructed by Mr. R. N. Henderson, appeared for the plaintiff, Richard Alexander Maude, of 7 Greyfriars, Auburn. Mr. Pike, instructed by Messrs. Norton Smith and Co., for the defendants, Henry James Vale and Son, of Auburn.

This was an action under s. 230 under the Employers' Liability Act. Plaintiff claimed that he was in the service of the defendants, and that he was injured while performing the services of the defendants, who had superintendence entrusted to them, plaintiff's finger was fractured while working at the lathe. Plaintiff also claimed that he was young and inexperienced, and was employed by the defendants to perform certain dangerous work in driving rivets out of iron with a hammer and punch. The defendants neglected to give him the directions and warnings.

The defendants entered a plea of not guilty, and denied that any persons in their service were negligent or careless, and that the plaintiff was injured through negligence or carelessness of them, were guilty of negligence as alleged.

Plaintiff said that on February 25, after he had been striking for some time, James Townsend, a boiler-maker, said to the punch, "Hold on," and hit him with the punch. While holding the punch it slipped, and he called out to Townsend, "Hold on," and he struck him with the hammer down and bit his finger. Plaintiff received his work as a stoker. Boiler-maker's assistant received his work as a stoker.

The case stands part heard.

LAND APPEAL COURT.

(Before the President, Mr. Curry, and Mr. W. Houston, C.M.G. Commissioner.)

Mr. Hanbury Davies appeared for the Minister. Mr. Hannay appeared against the appraisal value of a Crown Imperial Estate, No. 1908-20, Grifton. Mr. Pike, instructed by Messrs. Fitzgerald and McIntyre, appeared for the appellants, the Land Board. By consent the case was remitted to the Land Board for rehearing and the production of evidence given to be taken as evidence at the rehearing. Deposit to be refunded.

Plaintiff appealed against the appraisal value of the estate, No. 1908-20, Grifton. The appellant claimed capital value of the land comprised in his original conditional purchase, No. 1909-2, and additional bonus, No. 1909-3, and additional bonus, No. 1909-4, and additional bonus, No. 1909-5, and additional bonus, No. 1909-6, and additional bonus, No. 1909-7, and additional bonus, No. 1909-8, and additional bonus, No. 1909-9, and additional bonus, No. 1909-10, and additional bonus, No. 1909-11, and additional bonus, No. 1909-12, and additional bonus, No. 1909-13, and additional bonus, No. 1909-14, and additional bonus, No. 1909-15, and additional bonus, No. 1909-16, and additional bonus, No. 1909-17, and additional bonus, No. 1909-18, and additional bonus, No. 1909-19, and additional bonus, No. 1909-20, and additional bonus, No. 1909-21, and additional bonus, No. 1909-22, and additional bonus, No. 1909-23, and additional bonus, No. 1909-24, and additional bonus, No. 1909-25, and additional bonus, No. 1909-26, and additional bonus, No. 1909-27, and additional NEWCASTLE, Monday.

By far the most dramatic episode of the campaign took place to-night, when Mr. Wade faced an audience of several thousands in the Olympia Skating Rink at Newcastle. The Premier had often been dared to show himself in the northern coal centre, since the incidents of the late strike, which had aroused such bad blood in the Labour camp; and even his friends had some misgivings as to whether

It would be quite polite from a personal point of view for him to attempt to address a meeting here.

It must be confessed, too, that Mr. Wade himself did not look absolutely at his ease as he mounted the platform, and glanced round the densely-packed throng that was gathered under the open sky in the ring. He waited a little apprehensively, as did every one around him, for the outburst that his appearance was to evoke. But the unexpected happened, and its happening was at first almost as startling as any violent outbreak. The group on the platform greeted the Premier with a feverish handclapping—but the crowd sat practically silent. That silence continued throughout the preliminaries, and had the effect of heightening, rather than lessening, the ten-

"Oh, put your tile on, Charlie," came from somewhere among the miners, and there was

It was the interjection and guffaw which gave an index to the temper of the crowd—this much, at any rate, that they were not there to hawl the Premier down, but were of a mind to hear something of what he was going to say. Mr. Wade caught the note immediately, and "went straight at it" without more ado. A quarter of an hour went by with but occasional interjections, and the meeting bade fair to be one of the quietest the Premier has addressed during the campaign. There were, as indicated, about three thousand people packed in the rink, and almost as many without, and although as the speech progressed the inevitable interruptions of the ordinary political meeting began to manifest themselves, still for the most part the gathering listened attentively. The Premier did not mince words. He said that the Government was sym-

"What about the Coercion Act?" interjected someone.

"Oh, I'm coming to that," retorted Mr. Wade, in a voice full of confidence.

And come to it he did. And he worked right up to a climax, expressed in these words: "When a strike is insisted on in place of the peaceful methods of the law, the men arguing the strike are the worst enemies of the State, and must be dealt with by the law." This, is Newcastle itself—surely no man could say so much and get off scatheless. But the big crowd received the determined statement in dead silence, which was merely accentuated by the cheers from those immediately about the Premier.

The Mayor of Newcastle (Mr. J. C. Reid) presided, and among those on the platform were Mr. Dick and Dr. Beeston, M.L.C., and Mr. Owen Gilbert, M.L.A.

THE SPEECH.

Mr. Wade, who was received with continued applause, apologised for wearing his hat, as he was suffering from a severe cold.

A voice: Put your hat on, Charlie.

Mr. Wade: When he said he would go to Newcastle people had said you are not game. He told them he was not afraid, as whether friend or foe he was sure they were sufficiently broad-minded in Newcastle to hear the case.

as put forward by the Liberal Government, and give the speaker that fair hearing for which Newcastle was always famed. He wished to give an account of his stewardshipship during the troublous time in the last three or four years. He referred to the great increase of employment and wages during the term of the Liberal Government. The credit of New South Wales, not only in the Commonwealth, but in the outside world, never stood so high as it did to-day. (Applause.) The burden of the cry of his opponents was "Give us a show." But they were not playing a game of marbles. It was not kias-in-the-ring, where everybody should "get a show." (Laughter.) Referring to the subject of decentralisation, a topic which called forth a round of groans and jeers from a small disturbing element, Mr. Wade said the Government had decided that there should be means of communication between the producing centres and the nearest port on the seaboard of the State. They were done termed that the concentration of trade in Sydney should cease—(groans, and laughter)—and in this connection the claims of Newcastle would be considered on their merits. Two millions of money were being spent on international railways, and he hoped soon to see a number of parallel lines running from the interior towards the coast of the State. Sydney would be entirely excluded. (Laughter.)

A voice: If you are there.
Mr. Wade: We will be there, as you will find by-and-by.

In reply to the charge that the Wade Government was entirely out of sympathy with the working class, Mr. Wade said he would refer to certain measures passed by the Government to improve the conditions of the toilers.

A voice: The Corcoran Act, for instance.
Another voice: Shut up.

First voice: Will I shut up.

Mr. Wade: Let him speak, I am going to come to that in a moment.

Mr. Wade: One of the Acts he referred to was the Workmen's Compensation Act. For that great boon, the first of its kind in New South Wales, which would benefit about 160,000 people, they had to thank the Wade Government. (Cheers.)

A voice: Why didn't you include casual labourers?

Mr. Wade: It is included. Another most liberal act on the part of the Government was the railway superannuation scheme.

A voice: It's rotten.

Mr. Wade: You say it is rotten; yet I think there are very few men who will not take advantage of the most liberal pension schemes on the face of the earth. (Cheers.)

A voice: You'll break down, Wade.

Mr. Wade: It will be a long time yet before I break down. They have been trying pretty ward to break me down during the past few years, but as long as I have the great support of all reasonable people, you will find me going strong for many years yet. (Cheers.)

A voice: Wade, you are a master. (Laughter and cheers.)

Mr. Wade: If our work stopped at the Workmen's Compensation Act, and the superannuation scheme, we would go down to posterity as a Government having at heart the welfare of the workers, and of a great body of deserving the public servants. (Cheers.) I would like to say something about that Act around which so much trouble had centred during the past couple of years—the Industrial Disputes Act. (Cheers.)

A voice: Now we are going to have it. (Laughter.)

Mr. Wade: The Arbitration Act of ten years ago had proved too cumbersome, expensive, and slow, and had the effect of leg-ironing the workers seeking redress. The Government, as the outset of its career had promised to do away with those difficulties, and replace it by an Act that would achieve the object sought more speedily and less expensively. (Laughter.) "It is no use you laughing," said the Premier. Despite all the criticism and the boycott of the Trades Hall, the record of the new Act was the most eloquent proof that the measure had been in the best interests of the workers of New South Wales. (Cheers.) He knew of no speech that had been so or New Zealand by either that disputes could be settled so promptly, and under which improved conditions had been so universal. Mr. McGowen's party had done its very best to destroy this Act in all its stages, and despite all the benefits that had been gained under the measure, one of the planks of Mr. McGowen's platform was the repeal of the Act, and the reversion to the cumbersome Act of 10 years ago. But there was a large body of workers who realised the good in the Act, and the main opposition came from agitators.
